FEW EASY WAYS TO STOP SMOKING

If you're tired of hunting for cigaretes, why don't you just stop smoking?

'It's easy," suggests Arlene Wolf, AP newsfeatures writer. "Just follow the directions (your choice of several methods) as outlined in 1917 by the Bureau of Moral and Hygience Education."

There was the chamomile cure, for example. Ten cents worth of chamomile, made into a tea and taken at meals and before retiring, was supposed to kill the desire for tobacco, as well as give "quick relief for all forms of nervousness."

When a would-be smoke-stopper wasn't within grabbing distance of a cup of tea, he was advised to carry a little box of pulverized ginger in his vest pocket, and take a pinch whenever the smell of other people's smoke became too much for him.

Suppose this noble character was dining with friends, who cruelly lit up during the meal. All he had to do was reach for an oyster on the half shell, sprinkle with red pepper, and gulp it down. Presto-he never wanted a smoke less. Provision also was made for meals which had progressed beyond the oyster-on-the-half-shell stage. He could resort to bread or cheese, similarly

Chewing substitute devotees recommended ten cents worth of gentian, sassafras, lovage, licorice flag and marshmallow, mixed and chewed like gum. Or you could smoke dry tea in a clean pipe, or sweet fern in a clay

There also was an immersion school of thought, which put you on a 14-day schedule. Every night, you were to fill up the bathtub half full of warm water, wrap tightly in a sheet, and climb in. Then you turned on the warm water until the tub was very hot, and stuck it out for 20 steaming minutes. The cure included directions for letting the water run out, arising, allowing the water to drip off, removing the sheet, and drying yourself. They concluded with an admonition to take some chamomile tea, and retire "under light cover."

But what with sheets being scarce, because of the cotton goods shortage, and laundries being what they are today, maybe you'd prefer to forget the whole busi-

HELP NEEDED ON KIT BAGS

An appeal is issued by the Red Cross in another column for help in making kit bags for our men in the armed forces overseas. Seems like it would be a good suggestion for women's organizations to make this a project through the holiday season, along with Christmas activities for the home folks.

The local chapter is urgently in need of help in meeting the December quota. Some of our boys will have to go aboard ship for overseas service without one of these service bags unless local women come to Call Red Cross headquarters, 2926, for supplies.

Some time ago a British flyer, who is also a composer, sent a new score to the New York Philharmonic Synphony's conductor. The conductor told the flyer that when he had shot down five Nazi planes, he would get a New York performance of his work. The flyer obliged. So did the conductor. Offhand, we can think of several non-combatant singers whom we should like to see subjected to the same requirement before being permitted to perform in public.

Goebbels has ordered the German people to stop talking about the war situation. Unfortunately for him, he can't stop them from thinking.

Now that the Greeks have their freedom, thanks to the Allies, they don't seem to know what to do with it.

If you want to play safe, hide the children's presents with their school books.

The more War Bonds sold, the quicker peace will come. Lay your share away for a reigning day.

Webb was a step toward victory. The next move would be the overthrow of the king.

The Reverend Hana, the king's chaplain, oblivious of the trend of political events, spent most of his time planning the details of the wedding ceremony.

In the center of the palace grounds he caused to be constructed a large, square tent of brightly colored tapa cloth. This was to be the nuptial bower. In this tent the princess would wait for her future husband. Before the actual ceremony there would be a grand torchlight procession of the chiefs bring him gifts. The king to Hana's delight, was in accord with all the old man's plans, especially that of having the chiefs bring him gifts.
